Baton Rouge, LA – Beginning at 7:10 a.m. tomorrow, August 11, the 2010-2011 school year officially starts in the East Baton Rouge Parish School System (EBRPSS). That means about 42,000 students and about 3,500 teachers will be hitting the hallowed halls of all 86 public schools in the parish to start a new year of learning.

Teachers, school staff, administrators, volunteers and principals will be at their posts early in the morning to greet students and their parents, direct them to breakfast or classrooms and welcome them on the first day of school. Superintendent John Dilworth will make the rounds, as well, visiting as many schools as his schedule allows during the day.

School Zones will be in effect tomorrow between 6:30 and 9 a.m. and between 2:00 and 4:00 p.m.

Note to Media - To help us more thoroughly assist our students, parents and guardians, media is asked to contact the district's Communications Department with any calls from parents or guardians regarding issues that may occur this first day of school.
